Nelson™ Miniature Chests

A SMALL WORLD AFTER ALL

Japan had a profound effect on George Nelson. During his first trip to Tokyo in 1951 and several more that decade, Nelson became fascinated with all things Japanese. That influence is evident in the 1952 design of his miniature chests. Reminiscent of tansu, cabinets with many small drawers used for storing a variety of items, the Nelson miniature chests provide wonderful little places to keep things. An interesting addition to nearly any room—whether at home or the office—these chests embody what Nelson appreciated most in Japanese design: “a sense of fitness in the relationship between hand, material, use, and shape.”

TEAK CONSTRUCTION

True to the original design, chests are teak, and six-drawer chests feature a white laminate top. An environmentally friendly rosewood finish replaces the solid rosewood drawer fronts used originally.

HAND-FITTED DRAWERS

Cabinetmakers hand fit each drawer for proper alignment and to ensure the wood-on-wood drawer glides operate smoothly.

TWO BASE OPTIONS

Chests without base rest on 3/8-inch-high brass glides. Chests with base have a four-star metal base painted white and fitted with adjustable glides. Metal drawer knobs are painted white to match bases.
