Benching that's better by design

Memo

Designed by Tim Wallace

Listen. Share. Respond. Create. We increasingly do a lot of different activities at work. But providing a myriad of complex products that are expensive to buy and harder to manage and maintain is not always the answer. The solution can be much simpler – able to meet a wide range of needs whilst avoiding over complicated specification and installation.

Memo is a work system designed to help companies be more agile. Re-inventing the desk structure to make it more relevant, Memo provides an efficient platform that helps users find whatever place best suits their task.

Making Benching Better

The nature of work is rapidly changing. We asked Tim Wallace, designer of Abak Environments and Atlas Office Landscape, to propose a bench design that reflects that change. Drawing on our long history of people-centred design, Wallace and Herman Miller's development team quickly understood that sometimes people need simple, inexpensive benches tailored to individual needs. Memo offers that new functionality without sacrificing simplicity.

Attainable and Accessible

As companies move towards a greater use of collaborative space, they need a greater variety of work settings – but without complex interchangeable systems. Memo's clever design and rationalised componentry ensures it is a cost effective desking solution for any work place, from start-up through to global organisations.

Clear from Clutter

Memo's simple and clean design creates functional and uncluttered workstations. Benches, integrated or free-standing meeting tables, project tables and storage units create a variety of mixed spaces. Screen heights in different styles and materials add personality. Screen-attached work tools, pin boards, whiteboards and shelves come in a wide range of finishes to add style and individuality.

Memo includes meeting tables to bring people together to discuss their work.
